The Gatorade Sports Science Institute was established in 1988 to help athletes optimize their health and performance through research and education in hydration and nutrition science.

To make sure the Gatorade formula is optimal for keeping athletes hydrated, GSSI conducts research on athletes across a variety of settings. Much of this work takes place at the GSSI research laboratories in Barrington, Illinois.

By working with and supporting research studies at top universities around the world, GSSI extends its reach far beyond its Illinois headquarters. To stay connected on the cutting edge of science, GSSI engages professionals from all over the world - from North America to Asia to Europe and Latin America - to conduct research and provide expertise on educational programs (www.gssiweb.org) for athletes and sports health professionals.

Professional organizations such as the ACSM, SCAN, NATA, PBATS, PFATS, AFCA, NBTA, and the CSCCa, work with the GSSI to educate athletes and sports health professionals on the prevention of dehydration and heat illness - maintaining the health and safety of athletes.

As the worldwide authority on strength and conditioning, we support and disseminate research-based knowledge and its practical application to improve athletic performance and fitness. The National Strength and Conditioning Association (NSCA) is an international nonprofit educational association founded in 1978. Evolving from an initial membership of 76, the association now serves over 33,000 members in 56 countries. Drawing upon its vast network of members, the NSCA develops and presents the most advanced information regarding strength training and conditioning practices, injury prevention, and research findings.
